Technology Education: Learning for Life

VOLUME ONE

Edited by Howard Middleton

Griffith University

DATTA

CONTENT

Foreword iii

Editorial Review Board iv

Pupils' understanding of robotics as a disruptive technology 1
David Barlex and Torben Steeg

Challenging technological identities in contemporary technology teacher education 9
John Barlow and Belinda von Mengersen

Design, Creativity and Technology in Victorian schools: a process "missing in action"? 17
Coral Campbell and Wendy Jobling

Mechanisms employed by primary school children to establish and maintain collaboration and achieve exploratory talk to enable enhanced problem-solving 27
Caroline Colfer

Student perceptions of the use of e-portfolios in the assessment of collaborative group technology projects 37
Richard Edwards

Design framework of instructional materials for engineers' moral education in an introduction to technology education 46
Shinichi Endo and Toshiki Matsuda

Dimensions for assessment of technology 56
Wendy Fox-Turnbull

The Effect of Design and Drawing Education Using 3D-CAD, and Paper Models 69
Shinichi Fujita

The necessity of making mistakes in the Technology classroom 77
Nigel B Goodwin

Talking about the future: What makes secondary-school students Choose or avoid a technology career? 86
Jan Grenholm & Edvard Nordlander

Liminality, Transition, Transformation – and Educational 'Re-Thinking' 95
Steve Harfield

Unpacking 'Emergence' 103
Steve Harfield

Criteria for Success Emphasized by Primary Technology Teachers 112
Eva Hartell and Inga-Britt Skogh

Similarities and Differences of the Aims and Contents between the Current Course of Study in Technology Education in Japan from 2008, "Design and Technology" in the National Curriculum in England from 2014 and Standards for Technological Literacy in the USA from 2000 122
Masataka Isobe • Sadato Yamazaki

The Model Solar Boat Challenge – A STEM project that engages students in learning 133
Wendy Jobling and Coral Campbell

The national and the local: conflicting requirements in the assessment of learners' performance 141
Prof Richard Kimbell